When we see a beautiful flower in the garden, instinctively we bend toward the bloom and breathe in. Often we are disappointed. As modern hybridizers work toward increasing pest and disease resilience, scent is sacrificed. This presentation will examine varieties of shrubs—peonies, roses, and lavender, and herbs—such as mints, lemon verbena, and pineapple sage, that offer a feast for your nose as well as your eyes.

About Rosenelle Florencechild

Rosenelle completed the Jackson County Master Gardener Program in 2013. She served as Head Gardener of the Lavender Garden from 2014-2016. She is a member of the Herb Society of America, the American Rose Society, and several local garden clubs.
